

ALL ON THE LINE:

William T. Wiley and the Slant Step

January 8th - May 2022

In 1968-69, Wiley created a sculpture titled Movement to Blackball Violence, this piece paid homage to Martin Luther King Jr. Since this was an ongoing project of his, he had stated that “The movement, the monument, would only be finished when it “achieve[d] proper proportions,” Possibly hinting that the battle to end racism will be a prolonged one. With the Black lives Matter movement being so prevalent in today’s society, we see that prolonged battle still being fought decades later.

William T. Wiley, Movement to Black Ball Violence (Homage to Martin Luther King), 1968-2006. Sculpture; Black friction tape ball, wooden stool, lead, wax, gold leaf, 50 x 24 x 24 in. (with Westermann log). Quenza Collection, courtesy Parker Gallery, Los Angeles. © William T. Wiley.

manetti shrem
museum